Excerpt: . Chapter XIV Sunday passed uneventfully, and on Monday morning at 4.15 we were off after de Wet, little knowing the dance he was going to lead us. For the next seven days we were to have continual fighting, and the longest marches and roughest fare we had ever had, or were going to have, while I was with Lord Methuen's column. Every man and horse on both sides was to be strained to the utmost, for it was Methuen's great dash after the celebrated leader, and one of the most determined and skilful drives of the war, unhonoured and unsung though it has been. Ninety odd miles were covered by the mounted men and guns in three days. Night and day the Boers fled across the veldt, leaving waggons, stores, ammunition, and prisoners behind them, and night and day the small...

Reviews

An exceptional publication as well as the font employed was exciting to see. it was actually written extremely flawlessly and helpful. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

-- Dominic Collins

This ebook could be worthy of a read through, and far better than other. I am quite late in start reading this one, but better then never. I realized this publication from my dad and i advised this publication to learn.
