Excerpt: .as great as that of the actual residents. The bazaar is a long, dark, dirty street, crowded with shops and stores and manifests on the part of the people a good degree of industry and attention to business. The houses upon the Campus were almost universally built upon a grand and noble scale, three or four stories high, of hewn stone--with many marble columns in various parts of them. Each one has an orange grove, of an acre or two in extent, surrounding it, and the whole is enclosed in a stone wall, in some instances, at least, thirty feet high. I think I may be very safe in saying that the building of such houses as these once were, with their appurtenances, would have cost at least an hundred thousand dollars in any part of the United States. There certainly was, previous to the revolution, much wealth upon the island. Was there not also much of that wealth expended in sinful indulgence, and like Nebuchadnezzar, in showing forth my power and for the honor of my majesty? And may we not, in the light of revelation, see in the hand of the ruthless Turk the instrument of divine indignation and justice? An awful warning to others. Oh that they did but understand the dispensations of an allwise Providence! 9. Sabbath. Scio has no Sabbath. This is too manifest from the reports of fire-arms--from the voices of frivolity and mirth heard all around--and from...
